To My Valentine

Fancy hearts and cupids
Dancing in a row...
A sentimental message
All designed to show...
Love for your beloved,
Wrapped in charm and grace,
Valentine's own greeting
Told on hearts of lace.

IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

At IPI, we hammer out all the details of our One Step construction loans up front — so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

Featherbed Blowout

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Will East Hampton Accept A $100 Million Educational Gift From Courtney Ross?

By Dan Rattiner

At seven o'clock last Wednesday night at East Hampton Town Hall, lawyers for the Ross School revealed for the first time the remarkable scope of Courtney Ross' plan to expand the private school that bears her family's name. The occasion was a meeting of the planning board necessitated because the existing Ross School, in the woods by East Hampton Airport, had wanted to build a new access road. The little access road where parents drop their students off in the morning had become congested. They'd need a new one, they told the planning board.

"Tell us what you plan to do with the other 140 acres," the planning board said.

That was a year ago. Last Wednesday night the board, heard how Courtney Ross, the widow of Time-Warner's Steve Ross, was proposing to spend about $100 million to expand the school into a major internationally known facility, one that would be on the educational cutting edge.

As a frame of reference, it would occupy about twice as much acreage as Southampton College and in terms of buildings footage, also about twice as much. The enrollment however, would be about half that of the college. Ross would be to East Hampton what Southampton College is to Southampton. In many ways, it also could be considered a gift to the town. Much of the school would involve interactivity with the community. There would be a teacher's institute for example, with conferences scheduled for local teachers. Half the student body or more would come from the surrounding area. (At the present time, of the 192 students at the school, nearly eighty percent come from the surrounding area. One of them is mine.)

The high school

On the way to this meeting at Town Hall I thought about an announcement made a month ago by NASA proposing to designate the airport in Westhampton an emergency landing site for the Space Shuttle. There were already seventeen such sites around the world. This would be the eighteenth. None of them have been needed so far, of course. Nevertheless, a woman who lives in a house near the airport wrote a letter objecting vehemently to the proposal. "I don't want that noisy Space Shuttle landing in our backyard," she said. And I wondered if East Hampton was ready to accept a gift of such scope.

The main meeting room at Town Hall was packed with about 150 people, almost all of whom seemed to be in favor of the project. Many of them were local parents whose kids go to the school. Some brought their children. As for the planning board members – this was probably just one of a dozen meetings to take place before any approvals were given – they seemed not unreceptive.

"It's going to take a while for this board to be comfortable with this," said Sheila Downs, the chairman of the Planning Board.

The immediate matter at hand was a review of an environmental impact statement that the board had asked for once they saw that the access

Matt and Annette Roque Lauer are about to be the newest residents of the Hamptons. They have just cleared space for a house on the twenty-four acres they bought (for the bargain price of $1.9 million) in Water Mill.

Irish actor Gabriel Byrne recently took East Hampton's Steven Speilberg to task. Spielberg shot a good deal of Saving Private Ryan in Ireland – because it was cheaper and he got to use the Irish Army as extras, said Byrne, who, in an interview with Irish American, complained about how Hollywood uses the Irish: specifically by having non-Irish actors play Irish parts. Byrne, who plays none other than Satan in End of Days, which features Arnold Swarzwenegger, would not play the devil with an Irish accent.

Real estate wiz Paul Brennan successfully defended his Sagaponack home from a thief recently. He and his wife, Connie Collins, were upstairs when they heard a suspicious noise. Paul went through the house and discovered a man in the act of taking Connie's wallet from her purse. Paul chased the thief downstairs but had the misfortune to encounter another intruder there, who hit him over the head with a two by four. The thieves fled, but Paul, who must have been smarting, did not relent. He followed in his Suburban while on the phone to the police – who nabbed the miscreants at a roadblock. Connie got her wallet back. And she said her husband not only sells houses, he defends them.

The first New York Times Magazine of the millennium featured articles on noteworthy people who had passed away in 1999. There was a piece by Southampton's Tom Wolfe on artist Frederick Hart who sculpted like Michelangelo, and a touching memoir of Willie Morris, the former editor of Harper's who for many years lived in Bridgehampton and was part of the literary rat pack that livened Bobby Van's before he eventually returned to his native Mississippi.

Realism was the key word for the 57th Annual Golden Globes. The top categories across the board went to productions straight out of our headlines, history books and daily life. Man on the Moon, The Sopranos, RKO 281, Sex and the City. There were Hamptonites scattered throughout the crowd. Steven Speilberg (Saving Private Ryan) last year's award winner for Best Director handed out this year's award to Sam Mendes for American Beauty. The realism...well, if you've seen it – you know! Also there was beautiful Kim Catrall, who was nominated for a Best Actress Award, on Mark Levinson's arm, similing ear to ear for all of Sex in the City's success.

road was just a piece of something quite a bit larger. This statement, a year in the making, was about the size of Tolstoy's War and Peace and though the discussion that night would be about the statement, there were all sorts of references and descriptions of the school in its final form, and the completion date – 2009.

The Ross School would include two theatres, a library, an elementary school, a middle school, a wellness center with an indoor swimming pool, a performing arts center, a track and field oval, five tennis courts, two ecology labs, a center for educational research and development at which teachers, both local and from around the world would bring ideas and an elders center, where there would be programs designed to exchange information between the generations. Altogether, the campus would have 450 students and an equal number of faculty and administration people. This would make the school about the size of Kent or Hochkiss or Dalton – except none of those has an elders center or a virtual e-school for the internet or a council ring, or a whole lot of the other things.

On some level, the proposal was so amazing that one was tempted to think it was all pie in the sky unless funding could be secured. The thing is however, the Ross School has Courtney Ross and Courtney Ross, is worth several hundred million dollars. She has already committed the funding.

So here is how the meeting went.

Early on it was established that the land was zoned for industry and among the things you could legally do on the property today was to have a truck terminal, a sand mining business, an asphalt and paving company, a scrap yard, a car wash or an oil storage tank facility.

A few years ago, an environmental group had done a study in the area and had suggested the zoning in the southern half be changed. It should become a residential district with five acre parcels and a preserved open space so animals could roam free. On the northern side of the property, the zoning should remain unchanged as industrial. It was out by the airport, after all.

The upshot of this was that the zoning was behind the times.

The chairman of the planning board said that discussion would be confined to an examination of the correctness of the Environmental Impact Statement (EIS). In particular, the town planner had gone through it and had found a lot of discrepancies, had written them down and now the discrepancies would be read aloud.

The Impact Statement had documented all sorts of birds and animals on the site.

"We question the identification of a woodchuck on the property," the clerk of the Planning Board read from the discrepancy report. "The species is not at all common on Long Island, and its presence on site would be a significant finding.

"The impact statement notes that the project could result in an increase in the deer population, because there would be less hunting, but fails to note the adverse impact of such an increase on the nearby airport and roadways. The statement referred to proposed athletic playing fields as meadows, but by no stretch of the imagination, could a playing field, which is mowed, managed, irrigated and fertilized be considered something that resembles a meadow.

"The report states that certain reptiles and amphibians would be expected to occur on the property, but then states that the project would not impact reptiles and amphibians because none were seen by the survey personnel. This is illogical. The statement describes a fairly large pond at the low point of the campus. Will it be lined? How will it be maintained? Will it be landscaped?"

There was a discussion in the impact statement of how much drinking water would be used if the school were expanded to this level and there were comments about nitrogen levels. There was discussion about how much human waste would be created every day by the project.

"The Impact Statement figures are too low," the clerk read.

A man sitting next to me whispered, "Poop problems."

The reading went on and on. There were discussions about traffic, the impact on the landfill, police department, fire and ambulance department. There were discussions about the scale of the project itself.

At the present time, the Ross School is small by school standards, but not that small. Already out in the woods by the airport they have, with town approval, already, built six buildings totaling 127,000 square feet. These buildings are along Goodfriend Park Road, the road that now has traffic problems at the start of the school day. From the six existing buildings, the plan is to add an additional twenty-five, for another 530,000 square feet. The Ross School would then, in 2009, total 657,000 square feet in thirty-one buildings. Southampton College today totals 331,300 square feet in forty-three buildings. It is unknown how large the college will be in 2009. But they do have room to expand.

The meeting broke up about two hours after it had begun with promises there would be further meetings. The attorney for the school said that it welcomed the comments from the town and it was their desire to make a proposal that would be as environmentally acceptable as it could possibly be. That was one of the tenets of the school.

Earlier in the day, before the planning board meeting, I had stopped by the school to see my son, who is a sophomore there, and to speak with Mrs. Ross. There was a meeting in the library. Courtney Ross described how she had come to found the school.

Originally, after her husband passed away she had her daughter tutored at home. She then arranged for her daughter, together with a private teacher, to go to Europe. The following year, she filed papers to establish the school and took not only her daughter, but several other children for the school year for a private tutored education.

After that, more children joined up, including children who were taken aboard on scholarship.

Finally, a single condominium unit was taken in Goodfriend Park, a business park in the industrial area by the East Hampton Airport that had five units in each of four condominiums.

The following year, Mrs. Ross bought that condominium and expanded the school to include all the units in that building and the next year she bought the whole Goodfriend Park development, which included three other condominiums. Finally she purchased 140 acres surrounding Goodfriend Park and here we are.

Current estimates are that she probably spent $12 million in renovating or completely rebuilding some of the buildings in the park.

"Why do you want to build a school of such a size?" someone asked her at the meeting.

Courtney Ross answered by saying that there was an educational crisis in the country, almost one third of all teachers would retire by the end of the decade and she wanted to create a facility that would help deal with this crisis and she wanted to make it big enough so that others could take notice of it.

"How do you think another town might feel about having a $100 million donated toward education?" she asked.

You know, there are some people who give nothing back, and there are others who give what they can, either by donating a park bench or writing a check. Courtney Ross, who inherited her money upon the death of her much loved husband, can afford to give $100 million to put an educational facility in East Hampton for the children of that town and for anyone else who would like to go there. I, for one, applaud her. •

They Are The Gods And Goddesses And We Are But The Unwashed Humble Rabble

By Dan Rattiner

Anybody who wonders why people are in awe of celebrities need only to look at what happened when Dave Letterman underwent a quintuple heart bypass surgery last week. Twenty-four hours after the operation, the New York Post and the New York Daily News ran full page, front-page photographs of Letterman, fully dressed, upright and smiling happily at the camera.

"They Installed Easy Pass," the Post headlined in quotes, indicating this came directly from Letterman himself. The News had a similar headline and, inside, both papers reported that Letterman had come through the surgery with flying colors and was joking merrily with the hospital staff. Well, I don't know about you, but I have visited members of my family who have gone through a quintuple bypass – it is about as major a piece of surgery as you can have – and after twenty-four hours the patient just lies there, tubes sticking out everywhere, medical equipment monitoring their vital signs, beeping. The best they might offer a visitor is a low moan.

How could it be so different for David Letterman? Well, I suppose if you just glance at the headline and read the joke, you conclude that since Letterman is a celebrity and a star, he's not like some ordinary mortal. On the other hand, if you think about it, you can conclude that what really happened was that Dave was lying there moaning and beeping like everybody else and a team of comedy writers at the big skyscraper on Sixth Avenue – that's the big NBC Building – sat around a table for several hours, until they could come up with this line – a real thigh slapper. The photograph accompanying the gag would have been something taken months ago.

"Find something that would make him look sensational," an exec would say.

The next day, Letterman's second day after the surgery, he was filled with more comic humor. The show's producer, Rob Bernett reportedly asked Letterman, "Dave, how do you feel?" And he responded, "Better than Jimmy Johnson."

Johnson was the coach of the Miami Dolphins, a football team that had gotten slaughtered 52-7 in a championship game on the day of Letterman's bypass. The next day, Johnson quit the team. Ha, ha.

...a team of comedy writers at NBC sat around a table for several hours until they could come up with this line...

That same day, Letterman received a get well card and some flowers from President and Mrs. Clinton. Hillary Clinton, running for the Senate, had been on Letterman's show just three days before the surgery and had correctly answered, much to the amazement of the audience, ten very obscure questions about the state of New York. Exactly how many counties are in the State, what's the state bird, and so forth and so on.

Now how can we properly decide who to vote for when everything that comes out of a candidate's mouth is scripted by a group of funnymen, sitting around a big table in a New York skyscraper?

Consider Alan Alda, a resident of Mecox, who's performed maybe four hundred emergency surgeries in the most difficult circumstances imaginable. The hospital is a tent, the patients arrive by helicopter, which churn up billows of dust as they land in a field nearby. Occasionally enemy shells lobbed by North Koreans over a mountain from twenty miles away explode and obliterate things at random. What a guy is this Alan Alda.

You see Bruce Willis in a coffee shop, wounded and bleeding and still able to pick off thirty heavily armed terrorists, while out in the alley, the police blunder and stumble into booby traps with barbed wires. It's not anybody's fault all this goes on.

Antiques

From State-Of-The-Art, To We Don't Fix This Junk To The Rare Jurassic Period

By Dan Rattiner

Everything is relative, as Albert Einstein once said. Here in the Hamptons you are not a local year-rounder unless your family goes back 300 years. On the other hand, any computer that goes back two years is considered ancient, a three year old computer is only a good doorstop and for a four year old computer you'd be lucky to find anybody alive who still knows how they might work.

A case in point is my IBM butterfly laptop also known as the 701C, the computer for which I paid $3,000 in 1996. That wasn't so long ago. They sent up a Space Shuttle to fix the Hubble telescope that year, Jack Kervorkian participated in his eighteenth and nineteenth suicide and O.J. Simpson was acquitted after a long trial that had begun the year before.

But just how long ago this was in the world of computers I learned last week when I tried to get the Butterfly fixed. It seemed to me to be a minor problem. The image on the screen would start rolling when you lifted the lid to turn it on. When the lid was all the way up, it stopped rolling. It just seemed something might be loose.

When I had gotten this computer I was very proud of it. At the time, flat color monitors for laptop computers had not yet been designed larger than ten and a half inches on the diagonal. Since a standard size keyboard measures thirteen inches on the diagonal, and since the idea then – and it still is – was to make the laptop as small and lightweight as possible, IBM engineers built a laptop computer that was only ten and half inches on the diagonal. As you opened it, however, a large plastic gear swiveled, and in doing so unfolded the keyboard, like the wings unfolding on a butterfly. When they locked in place the keyboard was a full thirteen inches and sat on top of the ten and a half inch laptop like an overhanging flight deck on a navy aircraft carrier.

I had a few problems with it during the first year I had it and I would call IBM and they were very helpful. All included in the warranty, they told me.

IBM was very proud of the fact that the Butterfly had been named by at least three computer magazines as the Product of the Year in 1996, an ingenious solution to an apparently unsolvable problem. Later that year, I paid a few dollars to extend the warranty on the machine. I expected the Butterfly would give me many years of fine service.

Two weeks ago, however, I noticed the screen rolling problem. I have three and a half years of data on the computer and figured if the problem got worse I would not be able to see the work and that would be very bad.

"Service is $90 an hour. And you have to pay up front." "Wait a minute. This was Product of the Year."

So I called IBM and armed with my preferred customer number and my serial number, went through the familiar battery of automated phone transfers to get to the service department.

"Your call may be monitored for quality purposes," a voice said, as it usually did, to inform me I would be able to speak to the next available technician.

"Hi, this is Bob, whom am I speaking with?" a man said.

We exchanged pleasantries and I gave him my serial number and my preferred service account number.

"Wow, you still have a Butterfly?" he asked after finding out the model number I had. "We were just talking about them here. That was a very unique machine."

"Product of the Year in 1996," I said, proudly.

"Well, you will have to give me a credit card number before I can talk to you about it," Bob said.

"Why is that?" I asked.

"Because we don't support the Butterfly anymore. Service is $90 an hour. And you have to pay up front."

"Wait a minute, wait a minute," I said. "This was Product of the Year."

"That's very true," the technician said.

"Look," I said, trying any way I could to get to talk to this guy. "I don't need service. This isn't a service call."

"Then what is it?"

"I need a part. When you lift the lid, the screen rolls upward, but it only does it for a few seconds and then when the lid is all the way up it's fine."

"You need a new video cable," Bob said. "The video cable runs through the swivel gear that opens the butterfly wings. It's chafing. We've heard of this problem before." Bob's voice dropped to a whisper. "It's a design flaw. But I'm not supposed to be telling you that."

There was a long silence during which both of us had the same thought. We were thinking of that voice which said, "This call may be monitored for quality purposes." A job could be at stake here.

"So tell me where do I call to order a part," I asked, loudly.

"Well, that I can tell you," he said. "You can order it on the internet. I can give you the internet address. You click on 701C and you'll see an exploded view of the machine with all the parts labeled. You'll just need a video cable."

Then his voice dropped to a whisper again. "Just take it to a local computer repair store," he said. "And by the way, if you ever want to sell the Butterfly – it isn't worth much – give me a call. I'll give you my name." He did, also his extension number. No, I will not reprint it here.

"It's a real antique," he said, loudly.

We ended the phone call and I went on the internet and found the site, and the exploded view of the Butterfly and I easily found the video cable, which was labeled with an arrow and #7. Where the part numbers were listed, however, there were two possible cables to buy for #7. One of them, for $39, was for the 701C, the other one, for $99, was for either the 701C or the 701CS, which I remembered was for a 701C. What the hell was a 701CS?

I took a deep breath and called back IBM service.

"Hi, this is Eddie. What's your name?" I told him.

"What's your problem?"

I told him that this was not a service call and I just needed to know which of the two video cables to order.

"What is your credit card number?" he asked me.

"Look (I was getting real good at splitting hairs), this is not a service call, I just need to know which of these two parts to order."

Eddie took a deep breath. "That's fair," he said. "Wait and I'll ask around to see if anyone knows the difference between these two."

He put me on hold and then came back. "That's really a great old machine, the Butterfly. A real antique," he said. "Not many people have them anymore."

"Which cable should I buy?" I asked.

"The expensive one," he said. "But let me give you my extension number. If you have a problem or if someday you want to sell the machine, I might be interested. I am happy to help you find which of the two parts you should order," he said loudly. "But remember, if you ever do need a service call it's $90 an hour."

I said goodbye to Eddie, and said another goodbye to the imaginary person I visualized monitoring our phone call for quality purposes.

Five days later, the part arrived. I took it to Computer Professionals in Wainscott and in one hour they swapped it out for the one that was defective. It has worked fine since.

John at Computer Professionals only charged me $45 – his charge for a one hour repair, by the way.

"There is somebody else out here that has one of these old Butterflys," he said as he gave me the machine back. "They are quite an antique. I'll give him your name and number if you want."

"No, that's fine," I said.

I took it home and showed Cathie how the screen had stopped rolling when you open it.

Cathie's family goes back 350 years, to the landing of the Mayflower. "What will they think of next?" she said. •

JUNIOR KROLL
BY BETTY PARASKEVAS AND MICHAEL PARASKEVAS.
Junior Kroll suffered the sins
Of Sammy and Tammy, the evil twins.
Dad invited a client-friend
With his wife and kids for a long weekend.
He liked Ken Brown but you can bet,
He wouldn't have done it if he'd ever met
The evil twins and their flaky mother.
She was always screaming at one or the other
But Sammy and Tammy did as they pleased.
They trashed Junior's room and constantly teased
Artie, the macaw. As he buried his head
Under his wing he shuttered and said,
"One is bad and two is worse
But I'd better not finish the rest of this verse."
The nightmare continued as Mrs. Brown screamed
At her evil twins while Mrs. Kroll steamed.
The men teed off every morning at ten
And Mrs, Kroll was madder than a speckled wet-hen.
Since the day they arrived, I failed to explain,
Crazy Max remained on the end of his chain.
Mrs. Kroll was afraid of what he might do.
On the third day they were having a barbecue.
Tammy and Sammy had just fought a duel
With hot dogs, then tossed them into the pool.
When all at once that chain gave way.
Holy Moly, Max saved the day.
The mere hint of a growl, the cool touch of his nose,
The curl of his lip and the evil twins froze.
And as Tammy and Sammy drove out of sight,
Mrs. Kroll kissed Junior and Max goodnight.

Rev. Martin Luther King's Daughter Bernice Speaks At Guild Hall

By Joan Zandell

When I arrived at Guild Hall on Tuesday evening, January 18, I could hear the joy and the passion of the gospel music as I entered the foyer; the house was rockin'. As I walked down the aisle trying to find a seat, I saw that the audience was a mix of black and white, young and old, male and female. And the house was full, packed to the rafters. All these people had come out on a cold winter evening to catch a glimpse of the woman whose remarkable father had changed America, the brave woman who is picking up where her father left off, the Reverend Dr. Bernice A. King. This was a celebration, and the occasion of course, was Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday.

She had spent the day speaking to the children of the Ross School about racism and non-violence, interacting with them and answering their questions. Now she was prepared to do the same with the adults of the community. The event had been sold out for some time. The audience was eager to receive her. Courtney Ross made a brief and respectful introduction and Bernice A. King stepped onto the stage and into the light.

She is a beautiful woman in her thirties and a powerful speaker whose deep faith attests her every word. But it wasn't always so. A year after her father was assassinated when she was five, her uncle, the man who had stepped in as a surrogate parent and who had been an expert swimmer, mysteriously drowned. Five years later at the age of eleven, her grandmother was murdered in church while delivering the Lord's prayer. She claims that God kept her from taking her own life. But how?

She asked the audience, "What was Martin Luther King trying to say to us? Why was he so great and powerful?"

She waited a moment and then responded, "He did more than come to terms with his purpose. He fulfilled his destiny."

She went on to say that he practiced unconditional love. And then cited how we have failed in human relationships because we have not figured out how to live together. Then she went on to quote Deepak Choprah, " We must grasp that we are spiritual beings having human experiences." She criticized people who are acquiring stuff versus developing themselves. She sees young people with lots of stuff as lacking in compassion – in her opinion they have acquired wealth at the expense of their humanity.

"Love is the most powerful thing there is. Now let's talk about the disintegration of the American family."

Dr. King feels that a spirit of greed and materialism has taken over the spirit of unconditional love in all relationships.

"And until we deal with the redistribution of wealth in America, we will be plagued by the moral disintegration of America."

Emphasis on the external, clothes, cars, houses, clubs, rather than the internal values of gentleness, kindness, compassion and caring is incorrect thinking. She blames Capitalism for breeding greed and selfishness, and goes on to say that actually talking about these issues makes us feel uncomfortable. Our priorities, Dr. King believes, are out of order. And while you are out trying to belong to a certain clique, where are your children?

"We are busy giving our children things rather than spending time with them. Unconditional love is kind, considerate and only cares about giving. Martin Luther King could take a life of hardship and risk because he had unconditional love."

> "He did more than come to terms with his purpose. He fulfilled his destiny."

Bernice King feels it is her duty to pass along this important way of life. She believes that fear is our greatest enemy – and the only way to overcome that enemy is through unconditional love. She went on to say that, "There is an exchange purpose that exists in the universe – when you become an open vessel to give it always comes back."

Perhaps in reflecting upon her own purpose and what she perceives to be her destiny, she remarked, "My father used to say a man is not fit to live unless he has found something worth dying for."

In her book Hard Questions, Heart Answers, A Collection of Sermons and Speeches, Dr. King embraces her father's vision of non-violence, criticizes America as uncivilized because it continues to institute the death penalty, condemns the use of guns and argues for gun control laws that work, examines our nation's commitment to human rights, discusses what it means to be a Christian man and what it means to be a black woman. In this collection of sermons she often quotes her father, but clearly has her own distinct voice. At the end of the book, this voice asks, "If you have not already done so, ask yourself, why am I here? What is my life work supposed to be? Once you do this, you will open the gateway to your soul and discover a wealth of information about yourself that you never knew."

Dr. King addresses the three types of people in the world, the people who sit on the sidelines and watch, the few who get involved and make things happen, and the overwhelming majority who do not pay attention. Her book and her presence is a wake-up call to pay attention. Pay attention to your thoughts, your life, and your soul. Her life is a constant reminder to take responsibility by being present, while consciously creating a new and better reality, regardless of how much or how little melanin there is in your skin. She believes that we are all here to make a contribution, and it is up to us to visualize what that contribution will be. She speaks to us like a loving mother who has suffered much in her young life, yet knows the meaning and the value of unconditional love, forgiveness and compassion. She has made a commitment like her father, to live a life of service putting the well being of her many children first.

The day after I heard Dr. King speak at Guild Hall I found myself thinking about the evening, contemplating what I heard and seen. I remarked to a friend how moved and honored I'd felt to witness such a powerful woman. Ironically, I was preparing to write this story when the following

fax came over the wire in big black letters, DEATH IN PRIME TIME, and then posed the following question,

"Should Public Executions Be Televised?"

It was a poll conducted by 21st Century Faxes, located at 532 LaGuardia Place, in New York City, who claimed that the polling results would be presented to all the major TV networks and their affiliates. In light of my previous evening and the many sentiments it had rallied, several emotions collided in mid-air as I gasped for breath. I suppose the first thought that emerged after recovering from the shock of the question was that this fax couldn't be serious. It HAD to be a prank. Despite all my spiritual leanings, I am a skeptic at heart, and to be sure I e-mailed a friend at ABC News to find out if it were possible that the network would consider something so horrendous. His response was that although it was one of those things that come up occasionally, it hadn't been considered seriously enough to warrant a poll.

My next thought was to feel sick about the individual who felt that this would be a controversial attention getting device. He was right. It got my attention. It is shocking and upsetting to imagine that we are so callous and heartless that we would find such an event entertaining. Have we seen so much death on television that this is just the logical next step? In my mind's eye I could hear the execs saying, "Perfect we'll do it in Prime Time and we'll get Regis Philbin to host it, he's upbeat and funny, everybody'll love it."

What's next, the electrocution game for home use? Complete with TV camera, chair, shackles, disaster make-up kit and canned laughter? Send your video in to "best home videos" and the winner gets a trip to Levenworth where he can walk death row in the morning, and flip the switch in the afternoon?

In light of Dr. Bernice King's recent visit and her father, Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday, I felt a great sadness that such a message, something so utterly lacking in humanity had been sent out into the universe. At the beginning of a new millennium, at a time when the economy is booming, is this really the best that we can do?

I returned my attention to the fax in my hand. To engage and respond, thereby casting your vote, would cost the caller $2.95 per minute, an average call lasting one to two minutes. The fax boasted "$2.95 per minute, a small price for democracy". Democracy? Is that what we're calling it now? Unfortunately, by this time Dr. King was on her way back to Atlanta, but I believe she might have had a thing or two to say to 21st Century Faxes Ltd. •

Craig Claiborne (1920-2000)

By Jerry Cimisi

Craig Claiborne, who both revolutionized and popularized the art of writing about food and who was the food editor and restaurant critic of The New York Times, died last Saturday in New York. Mr. Claiborne, who was a longtime resident of East Hampton as well as Manhattan, was instrumental in educating Americans with, espeically, the cuisine of France. The author of more than twenty books on cooking, his classic The New York Times Cookbook, published in 1979 and co-written with frequent collaborator chef Pierre Franey, was inducted in the Cookbook Hall of Fame in 1981.

Claiborne was born in Mississippi, in the picturesquely-named town of Sunflower. As a child he showed a love for his mother's kitchen and would often say throughout his life that the scent of certain cooking aromas would, Proust-like, transport him back to that heaven of Southern food.

After considering a medical career, Claiborne studied journalism at Mississippi State College. With the onset of World War II he entered the navy, became a communications specialist and then, on a submarine chaser, the executive officer.

After the war, Claiborne worked in public relations in Chicago and New York. It was in New York that Claiborne was able to take clients out to a restaurant, but his salary precluded him from dining out on his own, a situation that caused him to develop his own cooking skills.

By the late '40s, Claiborne knew he liked to cook and liked to write, but was not able to formulate a goal for these two passions until he underwent another stretch in the military during the Korean War. He said that one day, alone on an atoll in the Pacific, he visualized a distinct vision for his life: he wanted to be the food editor of The New York Times.

This was a stretch indeed, but to make his dream come true, Claiborne studied at the École Hoteliere de la Société Suisee des Hoteliers in Switzerland where he learned French cuisine. He took a job as a receptionist at Gourmet magazine and eventually became an editor there.

In 1957 The New York Times was looking for a food editor. Traditionally the job had gone to a woman. But an executive editor at the Times, who was also a southerner and alumnus of Mississippi State, hired Claiborne.

As food editor and frequent restaurant reviewer, Claiborne brought a passionate yet controlled style to the food section of the paper. He would visit a restaurant three or even four times anonymously before writing a review. His culinery training allowed him to detail and judge the work of the chef. Claiborne said that in his first years in New York he found few restaurants that were really excellent. One of them was Le Pavillon on Fifth Avenue where Chef Pierre Franey worked. When Franey left the restaurant he often collaborated with Claiborne, on both food reviews and books.

Claiborne often worked on recipes in his East Hampton home where he also threw cookfests during which he took notes on the dishes many of which were prepared by well known chefs.

Claiborne's books include The New York Times Guide to Dining Out in New York (1965); The New York Times International Cook Book (1971. With Pierre Franey he wrote, among others, Classic French Cooking (1970). With Virginia Lee he wrote The Chinese Cookbook (1972). And just last November The Best of Craig Claiborne was published, edited by Joan Whitman, his editor at the Times. She said, "Craig Claiborne educated people about food at a time when it was celebratory. It wasn't analyzed to the degree it is today. It was a wonderful period of discovery and enjoyment."

Claiborne has been credited with making haute cuisine accessible to the average person, but it was a talent he said he struggled over, ever concerned that he had accurately portrayed a dish or restaurant. Though like a centerfielder making a great catch look easy, readers would not be able to find the angst in Claiborne's capable prose.

Claiborne touted up-and-coming chefs in his columns and was supportive – sometimes even financially – of those in the food business.

Claiborne and culinary pal Franey made headlines in 1975 when Claiborne won a contest that awarded a dinner for two anywhere in the world at any price. The pair dined at Chez Dennis in Paris, consuming a thirty-one course meal with three vintage wines (one from1835) over five hours. The tab: $4,000. There was much protest that in a world where too many people went hungry, such consumption was indecent. There was even a denouncement from the Vatican.

At any rate, when leaving their long repast at Chez Dennis, Claiborne said to Franey what he found most distinctive about the meal was that he did not feel stuffed. •

TEN YEARS AGO

"Foreman Defeats Cooney In Westhampton"

January 26, 1990

A considerable crowd assembled at the disco Marrakesh in Westhampton Beach the other night to watch a local boy make good on the TV screen. Actually, he would only be making good if he could flatten a 253 pound former heavyweight champion of the world by the name of George Foreman, but what the heck.

Our local boy is Gerry Cooney, the heavyweight prizefighter, who adopted our area a few years ago – originally he is from Huntington – by buying a home in East Hampton and moving out here with his new wife and baby. In town, people have found him warm and friendly and very likeable. He plays in a pickup baseball game behind the Easthampton A&P once in a while and played right field at the annual Artist/Writers Game last summer. But you have to look up to him. He's even bigger than George Foreman – he is six foot five – and one of the handsomest men you might ever see. Everyone here at Marrakesh on fight night was wishing him well.

This was closed circuit TV in Westhampton Beach as the fight was really taking place in Atlantic City. Here at Marrakesh, there were screens all around and during the preliminaries which practically nobody watched there was a nice bar business for the place. A good plus on a cold and usually quiet night in the wintertime.

"Didn't Cooney train at Gurney's Inn in Montauk?" someone asked.

"I'd heard he had wanted to. But there weren't enough rooms available for his whole entourage of trainers and managers. Where he wound up was upstate."

Around eleven o'clock, the two fighters came into the ring to await introductions. Cooney looked in wonderful physical condition. He smiled a lot and waved at people and seemed very relaxed about the fisticuffs to come.

George Foreman, in the other corner, looked relaxed as well. Furthermore, it was pretty hard to find anything not to like about him. He has a pleasant face and a big smile. He too waved to the crowd and to some friends in the arena.

The sports commentator narrating the event explained about George Foreman's remarkable career. He had been the Olympic Heavyweight Champion in 1968, a whole generation ago, and he was the one, as he stood on the platform accepting his gold medal, who waved an American flag in the air to demonstrate his pride in being an American. This was during the hippie era and rioting in the cities. George had been Heavyweight Champion of the world after that and then, about ten years ago, he had retired, to become a preacher in a Baptist church in the South. Now, amazingly, at the age of forty-one, he was making a comeback in the ring. He had knocked out opponent after opponent many of whom did not have very good boxing credentials to be sure, but he knocked out eighteen or nineteen nevertheless and people were wondering – was it possible? Was George Foreman really championship material again at the age of forty-one?

Our man Gerry Cooney on the other hand, had had more limited experience. He was undefeated as a younger man for a very long time, and people thought he too might be a champion. But around five years ago, he got his chance to fight for the title against Larry Holmes and after thirteen brutal rounds he had lost. He hadn't fought much since. Though if he could get by George Foreman, perhaps he too would be on the comeback trail.

"And in this corner," the announcer was saying, "from Marco Island Florida, weighing 242 pounds, Gerry Cooney."

"I thought he was from East Hampton?" someone said.

"He lives in Marco Island in the winter," came the reply.

The fight did not last long. Certainly nobody expected it would with the punching power each of these huge men possessed. In the first round, Gerry landed a right to Foreman's head and Foreman staggered backward. Afterwards he was to say that it was about the hardest he was ever hit. But Gerry did not follow up on this advantage. Either he could not or would not and as the first round ended, Foreman had regained his composure and was fighting once again.

The fight ended in the second round. Midway through it, Foreman caught Cooney with a thundering right uppercut and Cooney's knees buckled. Here at Marrakesh, everyone groaned. Now Foreman did not let Cooney off the hook. He hit him with a series of punches and Cooney went down. When he got up, Foreman hit him and he went down again. It was over.

Most everyone stayed around after the fight, at least long enough to find out that Cooney was all right, which he was. The sportscaster interviewed him and Gerry gave all credit to George, and he said he was announcing his retirement. Cooney is thirty-one.

Leaving the disco, and walking down the sidewalk on Main Street to my car, I ran into Bud Schulberg, the writer who lives in Quogue, also walking out to his car.

"I guess Gerry will have to find something else to do now," he said. "I was up at his training camp. He really tried very hard."

"Well, I heard he is getting a million dollars for the fight," I said.

"It may seem like a lot," Bud said, "but it really isn't. After paying his trainers and handlers and promoters, and paying the taxes, he'll be lucky to have two hundred thousand left."

Bud's wife drove up with his young son in the back, and Bud got in and drove off. I'd guess Bud Schulberg to be in his seventies. It was a night for the older men.

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Spra

Observations of a New Islander #90
Oh Deer...

I live in a heavily wooded area, which is just about anywhere on Shelter Island. It's legal to hunt deer here with bow and arrow or shotguns.

I have to say, there's something very disconcerning about loading the kids in the car for school in the morning and hearing the crack of shotguns, which always sound too close for comfort.

On this particular morning, after I ditched the kids at school, I made a dump run, which on Shelter Island, means taking out the garbage. You stop at the recycle bins first and get rid of paper, plastic and glass. Then you stop at the "wet" garbage bin and throw away everything that can't be recycled.

The bin is slightly downhill so you drop your gigantic (hold five full kitchen bags) bright yellow bag of garbage on a slide and it rolls down into the bin.

On this particular morning, my bright yellow bag was the first one in. When it got to the bottom, it splashed into a dark red fluid about two inches deep in the bin. The red fluid dripped down the yellow bag. I spent my first seven working years as an Army nurse. I know blood when I see it. I was standing there in disbelief when my friend, the Magnificent Archer Brown pulled up.

"Archer," says I, "am I looking at blood?"

"Yes indeed. What do you think the hunters do with the deer carcasses? They're definitely wet garbage."

"You're sure it's not a Shelter Island divorce?"

"No. It's deer blood."

Well, I had to be sure, so I drove around to the dump station and asked the attendant.

"It's just deer blood. Do you want some venison? We got some to give away."

I skipped on the venison and drove home thinking about that stupid deer. I wondered if it died by shotgun or by bow and arrow. Which is more painful?

How many arrows does it take to kill a deer?

I'm not an animal rights activist, or a vegetarian. I buy real fur whenever I can afford it. It's just that meat and fur should come from a store and not direct off the animal for heaven's sake. It's just too primitive.

I've heard many people, myself included, express a wish that we didn't have hunting here. I usually say it as I stand in front of the meat counter at IGA, choosing a nice pot roast. The checkers always bag meat separately because of the blood that oozes from the package. Funny, that blood doesn't bother me.

And I deeply resent hypocrites who give me grief about wearing fur as they stand there in leather shoes eating a burger. I don't think animals care if they get killed for food or fashion. They're goners either way.

I suppose if I was a better person, I'd become a vegetarian. But then I'd have to learn how to cook all over. And it usually gets worse from there.

Next thing you know, I wouldn't wear fur, leather or suede. Then I'd start looking for cosmetics that aren't tested on animals, like I would give up my Borghese mascara for a squirrel. Then I might get annoyingly self-righteous. I don't mind people who are a little self-righteous, but there is a limit.

On the other hand, fur, suede and leather are biodegradeable. And we are omnivourous beings. And I know I'd look great in mink. And if I gave up make-up and left this house bare faced, any man who saw me would turn gay, guaranteed.

Well, I have to close now because my meatloaf is done.

MON-TALK with Ingrid Lemme

Quote of the week: "Women are being considered as candidates for Vice President of the United States because it is the worst job in America. It's amazing that men will take it. A job with real power is First Lady. I'd be willing to run for that. As far as the men who are running for President are concerned, they aren't even people I would date." –Nora Ephron

Hello everybody, how are you? Pretty damn cold, isn't it? Actually, it is fine with me; at least I don't blame unusual warm winter temperatures on global warming, and don't curse at people who are buying spray cans of the kind that are helping to destroy the ozone layer! Montauk is going to disappear in the ocean anyway in two hundred years, because scientists are predicting the sea level will rise by seventy meters. That is awful. I am watching Discovery channel for the latest update on this matter.

Can you tell, it's not my week? The low temperatures even keep my cats in the house. We share our little country house with Waffles, Syrup and Bacon. Kitten Bacon is too young anyway to go out on her own. And she just loves anybody, how will she ever survive? I had Sears in the house once again to fix the dishwasher (the Sears gang is practically part of the family) and little Bacon-Girl, flirts and cuddles with a complete stranger – bitch.

Scott Geery, a Montauk artist (Delicate Iron), found a starved, half frozen kitten on his way to Lazy Point, it was sitting in the snow, next to a couple of bushes and cried for help. God works in mysterious ways, as there is really no house, nothing on the stretch and he came to believe that this kitten would most likely not be a runaway. Scotty drove straight to the IGA and bought the most delicious, fancy cat food on the market and opened the can right there in his truck to feed the little, skinny fellow. The can was gone in no time and what developed, was love at first bite. While I am writing you good people out there my weekly letter, I am looking at Baby-Bacon in her little basket on my mahogany desk, curled on my favorite pillow, watching my fingers creeping over the keys (I can not really say that they are flying). To be honest, I didn't have much of a choice, little Bacon-Girl was insisting on sitting on my lap, reaching with her front paws on the keyboard. This was the easier, softer way of compromise. I Love Montauk!

–Love Ingrid

Superstars

It's also not anybody's fault that the Hamptons have become a place where celebrities hang out and where people are sometimes intimidated by being in the same room with them. The celebrities have chosen the Hamptons as their watering hole on the East Coast. After all, they have to be somewhere.

It was one thing ten years ago, when the community had only two or three of these people and the rest of us could see them around town and in spite of themselves, pretend to ignore them. We were proud to do this, to give them some privacy. It's quite another thing when there are so many of them that paparazzi and autograph seekers follow them around. It's more difficult for everybody.

It is important, I think, to distinguish between well-known people whose stardom is based on special effects and well-known people whose talent has led to real accomplishment. Uta Hagen, Itzhak Perlmen, Steven Spielberg, Edward Albee and Billy Joel, are all brilliant people highly honored by their professions. But this isn't so easy. Famous is famous.

I'd like to end this essay by pointing out that the Hamptons are no more or less beautiful because of the presence of the celebrities. The surf still crashes on our fabulous beaches, you can still walk on trails through our woods and forests, stroll along the sidewalks of our beautiful Colonial downtowns, made perhaps even more beautiful because of the wealth and fortune that have descended upon them. How this wealth impacts this area is, for the most part, due to the wisdom of our elected, ordinary, non-famous, year round residents. They are the real superheroes. •

"Harry's At Hanover" Fundraiser

The Child Development Center of the Hamptons, located in East Hampton held an event, "Harry's At Hanover" on January 13 at Hanover Square. It was a tremendous success. Despite the bad weather and the roads around Wall Street being closed off because of the Presidential visit to the Big Apple, two hundred brokers and bankers attended the event which raised more money than anticipated and everyone involved had a fabulous time eating, drinking and spending money. A list of participating restaurants can be found at the NYCVB website www.nycvisit.com or www.citysearch.com.

NEW YEAR, NEW OUTLOOK

This is the year I'm going to learn a new language, take dancing lessons, improve my golf swing, you promise yourself. If you make these, or similar promises yearly, but never fulfill them, you are amongst countless other people who know that the resources exist but the task of finding them is so daunting it can be overwhelming. Not to mention, of course, finding the time to fit the classes into your busy schedule. Now you no longer have an excuse. The following compilation will offer only a sample of the many classes/sessions which are held over the weekend or during the evening to help you once and for all realize your aspirations.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY (212-995-3656) – Check out their website for a complete listing of classes offered at www.scps.nyu.edu.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY (212-854-3774) – Offers classes at its Creative Writing Center and a variety of classes in other fields.

NEW SCHOOL UNIVERSITY (212-229-5630) – Offers courses on Saturdays. Also an extensive variety of classes can be accessed with their DIAL (Distance Instruction for Adult Learning) Program which enables you to take classes through the internet. You can even finish your B.A. through DIAL. Or take classes at the Greenwich Village campus which meets once a week during the day, evening or weekend.

NEW YORK OPEN CENTER (212-219-2527) – Offers an immersion program in Spanish; the tao of chinese calligraphy; meditation and prayer; creating the work you love; reflexology; technology and globalization in the new millennium; holistic health; herbal medicine; walking tours, seminars and conferences.

PRATT (718-636-3453/212-461-6040) – This well-known institution for art and design offers classes in both its Brooklyn and Manhattan campuses.

FASHION INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY (212-217-7178) – Offers classes in art and design, business and technology allowing you to study part or full time, morning or evening, seven days a week.

GOTHAM WRITERS WORKSHOP (212-WRITERS) – Offers both ten week and one day classes in a variety of writing disciplines. Classes are also taught online at writingclasses.com.

92 STREET Y (212-996-1100) – Offers classes, lectures, seminars and conferences on a variety of subjects throughout the year for nominal fees.

MUSEUMS – Why not become a member of one of the city's great museums and take advantage of their ongoing lectures, seminars, tours, films and special events (not to mention discounts on their merchandise).

Don't want to spend the time or money on a series of classes, then try these one night wonders at the:

LEARNING ANNEX (212-371-0280) – Learn how to speak any language, improve the sound of your voice, or lose your New York accent, stop smoking, boost your memory, speedread, overcome procrastination, free yourself of clutter, get out of debt, settle with the IRS, repair your credit history, invest in the stock market, computer classes, homeopathy/holistic medicine, cooking classes, overcome stress, marry rich, wine tasting, floral design, photography, knitting, candle or soap making, dance, tennis, boxing, reinvent yourself in the 21 Century and even change your identity. Check out the full list of courses or register online at www.learningannex.com.

SEMINAR CENTER (212-655-0077) – Learn numerology, time management, palmistry, kabbalah, reiki energy techniques, self-hypnosis, relationship building, massage techniques, holistic healing, computer courses, voice workshops, writing and publishing courses, home repairs, real estate sales courses, fencing (with foils) and with words (verbal self-defense).

Now that you know where to go, you only have to decide what to take. Remember the words of music legend B.B. King, "The beautiful thing about learning is nobody can take it away from you." Next week – The Year of the Dragon, a celebration of the Chinese New Year.

TRIVIA QUESTION:

New York's first school is still in existence. Where is it located?

Answer to last week's trivia question: New York was the state capital of New York from 1784 to 1796 and the capital of the United States from 1789-1790.

DAN TRAVELS

Escape To Jamaica

It actually happened. Winter, that is. We were very lucky this year. No snow and warm temperatures which were record setting. The cold has set in and has reminded us, we can take an escape route out. Where to go? Dan and I have a great suggestion. Since we are in one of the most sought after resort areas in the world, (the Hamptons) we were seeking a real escape. A place where the sun shines daily, water is crystal blue, white sandy isolated beaches that stretch for miles, scattered here and there with locals and sunsets that make you stop and stare. It certainly wouldn't hurt to have one of a kind hideaway resorts, and excellent food.

Jamaica has long been a favorite jewel in the Caribbean. A very popular fun in the sun location. Sometimes too popular. The true getaway spirit of Jamaica is alive and well in Negril. This southern part of the island is a seven-mile stretch of beach, where no building is allowed to be taller than the tallest palm tree. It is about a half an hour drive from Montego Bay. Inns are carved into the rocky coasts, setting off beautiful pristine beaches. You can dine by a sleepy lagoon or beside a waterfall.

Jake's is a collection of eight pastel-colored cottages set on one of the Caribbean's most intimate coves, located in the village of Treasure Beach. This family owned hotel opened in 1994 and is an ideal escape.

Designed by Sally Henzell and managed by her son, Jason, Jake's restaurant, pool and cottages are an eclectic mix of Jamaican, Mexican, Greek and Catalan styles. "Gaudi is my architectural hero," says Sally, who was the art director for husband Perry's 1972 Jamaican movie classic, The Harder They Come.

The rooms are just steps from the Caribbean Sea where guests can snorkel, fish, canoe or simply swim and sunbathe on a private beach or swim in the saltwater pool. Special excursions can also be arranged including trips to waterfalls, picnics on a deserted island, river safaris, bicycle tours, fishing and hiking. Massage services are available. Each room features a private bathroom and shower and is furnished with Jamaican antiques, local art and CD-cassette players with a selection of CDs. Remaining true to Jamaican simplicity, rooms do not have phones, televisions or air conditioning; ocean breezes and ceiling fans provide natural cooling. Each cottage is a burst of local color with hand-painted ceilings, glass dividing walls and wonderful bursts of sea air freely circulate throughout all of the rooms.

The restaurant at Jake's serves the best of Jamaica's spicy cuisine including Saltfish 'n Cake, rice and peas, escovitch fish, stewed guavas and banana flambé. After dinner, guests may dance on the patio by the sea, or wander down the road to the thatched-roofed bars and dance halls that are the real Jamaica.

Dan and I were so comfortable sitting outdoors with Jason and his beautiful (Southamptonite) friend Allie Duchange that we hardly noticed the late hour. The lobster was magnificent and who kept count after the third bottle of excellent wine!

The party continued the next night at a beautiful villa on the cliff. They were building the house for visitors to rent for next season. Again, Sally's taste is impeccable and wildly artistic at the same time. Home cooked jerk chicken and champagne on the rooftop under the stars was unforgettable. We look forward to coming back soon.It's more than affordable and should not be missed. Call Jason at 1-877-JAMAIC-8.

Rockhouse is in a similar category as Jake's, but has more of a south sea edge to it and resembles in structure and layout an African village. We were totally charmed by the (seemingly) young and handsome Paul Salmon, part owner of this resort. He is also one of the most entrepreneurial and hard working people, we have met. But you wouldn't get that from his laid back manner.

It is situated in the rocky area of the west coast on two-and-a half acres on the top of a cliff that drops precipitously down to the sea. Rockhouse is comprised of fourteen thatched-roofed, octagonal cottages of rock and wood in a jungle of exotic gardens. This unique hotel has a cliffside freshwater swimming pool that is a marvel of stone architecture. The restaurant, built of stone with a thatched roof, has a cantilevered balcony suspended over the cove. It serves three meals daily, featuring local specialties with a European touch, and offers a full room service menu. Ladders and stairs carved into the rock provide easy access to the water for swimming and snorkeling on the nearby reef. There is no beach.

The resort maintains its seclusion and Jamaican flavor as a rustic hideaway with a primitive charm, light-years away from the action of Negril or indeed, from civilization.

Regardless of how rustic the accommodations may look from outside, they are quite comfortable inside, including wonderful four poster beds. The stone and wood, peaked roof cottages have sliding glass doors that provide great vistas and lead outside to a terrace. The cottages are set far enough apart to offer privacy, too. Most are situated directly over the water so that you can fall asleep to the sound of the surf.

It truly is a feast for the senses. A feeling of simple elegance prevails, a private paradise. Possibly the best place in Negril to watch the sun set is from the wood-hewn terraced restaurant – which incidentally offers some of the best food in Negril. The only problem with this sort of luxury, is it gives you far too many excuses never to venture beyond the driveway.

Shop 'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

With the weather so stormy and icy, my shopping was limited this week. Sorry shoppers, I hate shopping in the snow, but a gals gotta do what a gals gotta do. Let's do some shopping!

At Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street in Southampton you can save up to fifty percent on merchandise in the "Winter Home Sale." Now is the time to shop, stock up and enjoy your super savings. Hildreth's House and Garden in Bridgehampton and the Clearance Center on West Main Street all have the same savings.

Bagley Home, Sag Harbor

Jobs Lane's American Pacific Factory Store is having an All-American sale. The "Winter Clearance Sale" is going on right now and you can save on all your quilts, linens, crib linens, comforters, and much more. Go for it! The John Rogers Collection Outlet features handcrafted teak reproductions and exciting new accessories for the home. Loaded with overstocks, factory seconds and special purchases, all the sales are final.

At Yesterday's Treasures on County Road 39 in Southampton and Galerie Hamptons on Montauk Highway in Westhampton Beach they are having an outdoor close-out sale with wholesale prices on all their remaining inventory. You will find a large collection of home decor, antiques and fine art. Lot's of mirrors, patio sets, leaded glass, slot machines, bric-a-brac, lighting and pottery, wall decor and teak deck chairs. You name it, you will probably find it here.

Butlers Art and Antiques located nicely on Montauk Highway in Water Mill, has a unique collection of eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth century oil paintings, sculptures and decorative objects. There is also a large selection of furniture circa 1800-1970.

At Wild Bird Crossing in the Bridgehampton Commons, where there is plenty of parking, the "Winter Sale" is going on right now. Enjoy savings from twenty to fifty percent off selected merchandise. From singing bird clocks, holiday T-shirts, birder's world calendars, birdbath de-icers and doormats which are silk-screened and durable are only some of the goodies on sale.

English Country Antiques is having a "Chinese Antiques Sale" with thirty percent off along with an upholstery floor sample sale. Located on North Sea Road in Southampton, Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton and Newtown Lane in East Hampton, do check this one out.

If you're driving through Bridgehampton, stop off at Tutto Bene 2. Everything is being sold for only ten to fifty dollars now through February 14. All sales are final, and there is plenty to choose from. The winter sale at Sunrise to Sunset on Windmill Lane is still going on. Check this one out.

I brightened my winter day, I stopped in at Artistry In Flowers on Hampton Road in Southampton and picked up a beautiful silk arrangement for my beautiful Depression glass vase. You can get lovely fresh cut flowers, dried or silk arrangements, table decorations, potpourri and candles. Or, send your favorite person a nice bouquet of flowers for just being there for you. Call 283-8200.

Second Nature Markets located on Newtown Lane in East Hampton and Main Street in Southampton is having a sale on some of the Country Life's top products and the every popular Flu sympton reliever, Oscilloccinum. Ahem, I'm on my way!

In Montauk, at Whites of Montauk, there is a summer-winter clothing sale on men's, ladies, and children summer wear, tops, shorts, water shoes, jeans, sweaters, hats and sweatshirts. That just about covers everything. At the Plaza, all the winter clothing is 30 to 50 percent off the Air & Speed Boardshop. You will also find great snowboards, skateboards, surfboards and clothing for the real sportster.

Are you thinking about spring a little bit? I'm thinking awning for my side deck. So, I called The Awning Company, Inc. in Sag Harbor to get an estimate. Their Design Center has a wonderful selection and the style is fashionable. Call The Awning Company at 725-3651. Oh, tell them that I sent you.

I had better stop thinking awnings and start thinking shoveling. More snow is reported and I'm just a one man band. I'd better get my shovel, hat and gloves ready and start shoveling so I can get out of my driveway to do some serious shopping.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Winter Shopping. — MT

ART BEYOND THE HAMPTONS: PART II – THE YUCATAN, MEXICO

It doesn't take a wizard to realize that the ninety-five degree weather in Yucatan, Mexico, differs greatly from our East End environs. But there are other, less obvious contrasts, especially when considering the question of art. First and foremost, Mexico is a visual culture, although not everything could be called "art" by today's standards. Even so, art is a part of the inhabitants' everyday life, providing information as well as color to often dreary surroundings. Bright murals telling stories decorate not only the buildings of a metropolis like Mexico City but the facades of a village like Isla Mujeres as well: figures of children prevade the elementary school walls; images of food suggest the local restaurant's menu.

Art which documents history also abounds on the tiny Isla Mujeres near Cancun, a place initially settled by the ancient Maya and in 1517 by Cuban slave traders. A small Mayan temple hovers over a cliff on the island's south side. Bronze busts of its primary discoverer, Francisco Hernandez de Cordova, stand proudly near the Town Square and the post office – the bronze material presenting quite a contrast to the surrounding thatched roofs (called palapa, the housing of choice for over three thousand years).

Art also exists in odd, subtle ways: the roof top of Rolandi's, a popular Italian restaurant, resembles a mixed media installation which makes a salient point – words on the wall spelling out the restaurant's name alongside sculpture – like utility containers.

Diverse architectural shapes crop up in other forms: a house looking like a seashell facing the sea; a colonial-style hotel, the Frances Arlene, on a village side street;

Work by G. Espinasse

a Postmodern, incongruent Martin Good Gallery, attached to the eloquent bed and breakfast establishment, "House of Dreams."

Speaking of galleries and "real" art, there's another new one on the island, "El Refugio" (The Retreat). The big surprise is the fact that the owner and exhibiting artist is a former East Hampton resident, Guillermo Espinasse, who showed at the Elaine Benson Gallery. Mr. Espinasse's style exemplifies Mexican aesthetic traditions (although he's from Argentina), combining Cubisim, Surrealism and Fantasy.

Further down the Yucatan coast, Playa de Carmen is a more "up scale" seaside resort, yet there are only a few visable galleries there. Our favorite paintings hang on the library walls and corridors of the Hotel Mosquito Blue. This time the Latin sensibility is represented by Cuban artists, one of whom, Reyes, effectively combines figuration with Expressionism and Surrealism: couples wearing ballet shoes interlocked with each other. Mostly, however, bright colors are lacking, warm earth tones taking center stage instead, including the wonderful abstract works by another Cuban artist.

The display differs quite a bit from the brilliant hues of a huge mural in the Intercontinental Hotel's lobby – an arresting piece but commercial at the same time.

The contrast between the two hotels demonstrates an important juxtaposition: the subtle as well as the "in your face" approach to art. Another difference is also apparent: nature and technology existing side-by-side: from the large video monitors adorning rustic restaurants in Isla Mujeres to Christmas lights decorating palm trees in Playa de Carmen. It's a disparity the American visitor can't easily forget.

Honoring the Artist: Rose Liccardi

It's not everyday that an ordinary American citizen receives a letter from Queen Elizabeth, even if we do live in a world filled with surprises. But that's exactly what happened to Sag Harbor artist Rose Liccardi in 1993 when she sent a painting to England's Monarch and got back a speedy response. The note reiterated the Queen's admiration for people like Mrs. Liccardi who "continue to live active lives for the benefit of themselves and others, despite setbacks."

It's been nearly seven years since that letter was received by Mrs. Liccardi and her son, Rocco, himself a long-time, respected resident and artist on the East End. Things have changed in the interim, however: Mrs. Liccardi has since passed away, but Rocco still talks about her as if he has just crititiqued her latest work.

Rocco's mother is very much a part of his thoughts and deeds in other ways as well. He recently spent two weeks in Italy, visiting the three hundred year-old house that had once belonged to his mother's father. "I had tried to buy it at one point from my aunt," Rocco explains with his characteristically hardy laugh, "but she said I would have only sold it to a foreigner."

Rocco speaks with pride as he continues to describe his mother's village and his father's small town, complete with "Roman ruins." He recalls the time he took his mother on such a trip himself in the 1970s, sailing across the ocean aboard a well-known, but now defunct, Italian cruise ship.

While it's apparent that Rocco feels strongly about his familial ties to Italy, family means as much or more when viewed on a daily, routine basis: everyday life. And that everyday life changed for both him and his mother nearly ten years ago.

When his mother suffered a stroke in 1990, Rocco encouraged her to try painting; after all, wasn't she an excellent cook, extraordinary with her hands? And didn't she and his father build their summer home themselves, brick-by-brick? Rose already had patience, tenacity, a sense of materials. Why not art?

And so, Rose began an artistic journey allowing her to paint over two hundred paintings, most of them done when she was in her eighties. While some people might call her endeavors "outsider" art (self-taught), this did not seem to demean her work's quality and popularity: Rocco gave his mother her first show of sixty paintings at his own studio/gallery in 1992. Three hours after the opening, they had all been sold. Since then, Rose had other exhibits, including Millennium Gallery's "Living Legends," curated by David Porter. "I couldn't beleve it," Rocco interjects with another laugh. "Here was my mother's painting next to one by de Kooning."

Even though Rose's animal paintings often seem a bit off-kilter, with horses having six legs ("My mom knew they only had four legs," says Rocco), there is an energy and fearlessness that mirrored her own attitude. As Rocco puts it, "My mom felt she could do anything if she wanted to. She communicated such a positive way of looking at life. People were crazy about her; she was so pleasant and enthusiastic to be around."

There was one thing, however, that bothered Rose. Rocco explains it this way: "She would say to me, 'People will find out that I'm not an artist. I want to give their money back if they buy a painting.'"

In all these years, no one has ever asked for his/her money back. Rose Liccardi's paintings are truly cherished.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Titus (-)

This movie is a colossal failure. I do not know what the director, Julie Taymor, had in mind, but whatever it was she failed to achieve it. At first I thought we were seeing something comparable to the superb version of Richard III, directed by Richard Loncriane and written by and starring Ian McKellan. In almost every review I read about this move, the critics stated that Titus was one of Shakespeare's weakest plays. I am not a Shakespearean scholar and therefore cannot comment on how this play compares to Shakespeare's other works, but I am smart enough to recognize a terrible and boring film.

Making matters even worse, the actors who play two of the film's most important roles (Anthony Hopkins and Jessica Lange) as well as many of the other actors who play supporting roles, provided dismal performances and even had trouble delivering their lines.

Indeed, most of the actors could not even manage, on many occasions, to make their lines intelligible or meaningful. They often delivered their lines in a declaratory rather than a theatrical fashion.

The opening scene was really the only moment when I thought this film might really be as good as the trailer promised. It contained an interestingly choreographed scene of Roman soldiers led by the victorious Titus, followed by the captives he had taken which included Queen Tamora (Jessica Lange), the defeated Queen of the Goths, and her three sons.

Then we had the first of the promised brutalities. In this case the murder of Queen Tamora's oldest son to satisfy Roman tradition. From that point on, we had revenge. Each side seeking revenge for the other side's most recent atrocity.

The vengeful acts include rape, mutilation, severance of limbs, cutting of throats, the tearing out of a tongue. You name it; it is in there. Including a scene in which Titus serves the Empress Tamora pies made of the chopped bodies of her remaining two sons.

There is similar cannibalism in the opera Sweeny Todd. But there the cookery was interesting, this was not.

Before the film was over, almost everyone is dead. I felt close to dead as well, having to stay in my seat for three long, boring hours.

Two key supporting roles were played by Alan Cumming as the Emperor Saturnius, and Harry Lennix, who plays the moor Aaron who, fathers a child with the Empress Tamora.

Although their performances were adequate (Cummings's less so), they added nothing that saved this film from being a complete failure.

Mr. Death: the Rise and Fall of Fred A. Leuchter, Jr. (+)

I was searching for a short movie, and one with an early show time. This one satisfied both criteria, so I went to see it at the Quad. I did not know what the film was about before I went, but I found the title intriguing.

It is a documentary about Fred A. Leuchter, Jr., who specialized in repairing electric chairs, many of which did not work properly and killed slowly rather than instantaneously. He was also employed by some states to repair their lethal injection machines.

Part of this film covers the trial of a neo-Nazi, Holocaust revisionist named Ernst Zundel. He was charged with violating a hate-crime law in Canada for publishing a false history denying the atrocities committed by the Nazis. Many countries, such as Canada, permit such people to be prosecuted for publishing false information. In the United States, however, the First Amendment generally protects such activities.

In any event, the defendant hires Leuchter, who is an engineer, as an expert witness. In order to prepare for his testimony, Leuchter goes to Auschwitz, and takes stones from one of the buildings in which it is alleged that the Nazis gassed the Jews with Zyclone B. Leuchter then sends the stones to an independent laboratory and asks whether they show any gas residue. He does not give the lab anyinformation about the purpose of the analysis. The lab reports it did not find any such residue, but the jury still finds the defendant guilty.

The Jewish community denounces Leuchter, who ultimately loses contracts with various states.

Any Given Sunday (+)

Football fans, and I am not one, will love this film. However, it is done so well in so many ways (particularly the field plays, and the performances of all the principal actors), that it will appeal to almost everyone.

Tony D'Amato (Al Pacino) is a football coach with a thirty-year history. He has been the coach of the Miami Sharks for many years and they are currently on a losing streak.

The team's owner Christina Pagniacci (Cameron Diaz) is as tough as they come. She is the original owner's daughter, and is convinced that she has to get rid of Tony. While it is obvious that we are going to witness changes in the team personnel, how this all happens is interesting to watch and totally believable.

The two major players on the team, both of whom are quarterbacks, are Jack Rooney (Dennis Quaid), who is aging, and the young and aggressive Willie Beamen (Jamie Foxx) who is fresh, proud and clearly has an attitude.

Harvey Mandrake (James Woods) is a corrupt physician who takes care of the team. He believes that the spirit of the team would be adversely affected if the players were "babied." Dr. Mandrake's assistant, Oliver Powers (Mathew Modine), is the "good" doctor. Unlike Mandrake, Dr. Powers worries about every player and tries to keep them out of a game when they are physically injured and in his judgement should not be playing.

There were a number of cameo roles. All of them well done, particularly by Charlton Heston and Ann-Margaret. Oliver Stone, who wrote, directed and produced the film, also has a cameo as a reporter, and is good in the role.

All in all, including the background rap music, the movie performed. The language is, of course grossly profane, but certainly realistic.

Before embarking on his present career as Dan's Papers film critic, Ed Koch was the Mayor of New York City.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

With Super Bowl Sunday on the horizon, a bowl of rich and lusty chili con carne with a basket of nachos and a refreshing pineapple jelly salad, is perfect do-ahead fare.

Chili is a fun food and invites lively conversation since there are so many versions of this spirited dish. Chili powder, the essential flavoring agent, is ground from the milder dried poblano chili pepper, and combined with other spices such as cumin. Some, who like it hot, can add the more fiery chopped fresh serrano or jalapeno pepper to their chili mix. Chili con carne is really nothing more than meat slowly simmered in a chili-spiced liquid.

There are countless interpretations of chili recipes. Texans, for instance, insist that chili can never be cooked with beans. While the proportion of meat to beans can vary, for me, the beans are indispensable. In the Silver Palate Good Times cookbook, Workman, you will find a vegetable chili made with meaty eggplant, bell peppers, plum tomatoes and both kidney beans and chick peas. I have read chef interpretations of chili recipes to include venison or wild boar and some chili aficionados will only prepare chili con carne with tiny pieces of shaved beef.

Meatless or meat infused, a spice-laden chili will continue to warm friends and family on the coldest of nights.

CHILI CON CARNE

A comforting do-ahead chili stew for a cold wintry night. Serve it with a bowl of fluffy rice and top with toasted cumin seeds.
Serves 8-10

2 tablespoons olive or canola oil
1 large Spanish onion, finely chopped
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 jalapeno or serrano pepper, seeded and chopped (optional)
2 pounds ground beef or shaved slivers of beef
1 can (1 lb.12 oz.) whole tomatoes and liquid
1/2 cup cold water
Coarse (kosher) salt to taste
2-3 teaspoons chili powder
1 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1 1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1 can (1 lb.3 oz.) red kidney beans, drained

GARNISH
Toasted cumin seeds*
Freshly chopped red onion (optional)

1. Warm the oil in a heavy flameproof casserole or Dutch oven over medium heat. Add the onions, garlic and jalapeno or serrano, if using. Adjust heat to medium and cook, stirring, until the onions are translucent, about 3-4 minutes. Be careful not to brown.
2. Add beef and cook, stirring, until the meat loses its red color, about 15-18 minutes. Season with salt to taste. Add tomatoes, tomato liquid, water and spices and stir to mix. Simmer for 45 minutes, stirring occasionally. If chili thickens too rapidly as it cooks, add a little water. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Add beans and simmer for 15 minutes longer. Prepare up to one or two days ahead and reheat slowly. Serve hot with freshly cooked rice and top with toasted cumin seeds. Add chopped onion garnish if desired.

*To toast cumin seeds: Place one or two tablespoons cumin seeds in a dry non-stick skillet. Place over medium heat for a few seconds and when the seeds begin to "talk" they are ready.

PINEAPPLE JELLY SALAD

A refreshing salad to accompany a wintry stew
Serves 8-10

2 cups canned pineapple juice
1/2 cup orange juice (fresh or frozen concentrate)
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoons white wine vinegar
6 tablespoons cold water
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) crushed pineapple, drained
1 bunch fresh watercress for garnish

1. In a mixing bowl, combine pineapple juice, orange juice, white wine and vinegar. Set aside.

2. Place 6 tablespoons cold fresh water in a small saucepan and sprinkle on the gelatin. Let stand 3-5 minutes until gelatin has absorbed the liquid. Do not stir. Dissolve gelatin by shaking saucepan slowly over low heat until it becomes a clear liquid and granules can no longer be seen. Pour immediately into combined juices and stir vigorously to mix well.

3. Drain pineapple cubes or crushed pineapple. (Discard or reserve liquid for other purpose.) Add pineapple pieces to the liquid-gelatin mixture and pour into a 1 1/2 quart mold. Refrigerate overnight or several hours to set.

4. Rinse and spin-dry watercress in a salad spinner. Refrigerate, wrapped in paper towels enclosed in a plastic bag until ready to use. Can be done up to several hours ahead.

5. To unmold: Run a kitchen knife carefully around the inside of the mold, then dip mold into a bowl of warm water for no more than 5-10 seconds. Place a serving platter, larger than your mold, on top and invert to unmold. Arrange sprigs of watercress around the base of the platter and serve.

New Theory: Cosmetic Surgery To Last A Lifetime

"During the 1980's and 90's, a great deal of cosmetic surgery was chosen (by patients) and performed (by plastic surgeons) in a procedural manner that was not unlike menu choices from a Chinese restaurant: one from column A, one from column B," says Richard D'Amico, MD, a New York area board certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon. "There was – and is – a lot to choose from, yet surgeons are now beginning to realize that the timing and frequency of procedures that, in the past, were almost whimsically haphazard, are a major issue in aesthetic anti-aging surgery." Top plastic surgeons now realize that in addition to a surgeon's skill and training, it is also the order in which the procedures are performed that can ultimately mean the difference between mediocre and excellent results as time passes. In light of that, Dr. D'Amico puts together an individualized "timeline" of procedures for each of his patients.

"Let's say that the first places we show age is generally around the eyes and in the chin area and around the neck. When a patient comes to me in their late thirties or early forties and complains that he or she is 'beginning to look older,' the first thing I generally do is upper or lower (or both) blepharoplasty and submental liposuction-suctioning under the chin and in the jowl and neck area. I'll do a little tightening of the muscle in the neck if platismal bands are beginning to form as well."

Generally, four or five years later, when a patient is in his or her mid-forties, as the forehead becomes more lined and lax and patients begin to notice that they have a sad or angry look, the timeline plan includes a browlift (forehead lift). "By that time, many patients are also complaining about some 'hollowness' under the eyes and an increase in the furrowing of the nasal labial fold," says Dr. D'Amico. "This is generally due to gravity's downward pull on the upper cheek area. In terms of a logical, patient-friendly timeline in plastic surgery options, a mid-face lift (or cheek lift) is an excellent rejuvenative technique to reverse this, and, combined with a browlift, the results are often terrific. At this time, patients who have not opted to treat the chin and neck with liposuction also consider doing so, and he or she may also consider laser skin resurfacing, which can also be performed earlier if necessary."

Thus, along Dr. D'Amico's timeline, the upper two thirds of the face and the neck and chin are successfully treated by the time a patient is around forty-five years old. "What we want to do last – in the late forties or early fifties – is the actual facelift, which is actually a misnomer in that the classic facelift really only addresses the lower third of the face and the neck. A facelift involves a larger, more generalized tightening of the underlying muscle structure of the areas."

Why wait for a facelift? "Quite simply, a facelift does not last as long as a browlift, cheek lift or eyelid surgery. While arguably the earlier a facelift is performed, the better shape a patient's skin and muscles are in, and therefore he or she may get a wonderful result. But it will only last about ten to fifteen years. So if a facelift is performed at around forty – which is rare but it does happen – a patient will almost invariably be requesting a second facelift in his or her mid to late fifties. If performed a decade later, often the results will last well into a patient's senior years. You want to get as many years out of a facelift as possible: it is more invasive than more incremental procedures, the recovery time is longer, and it is more expensive. More importantly, we now can wait longer because there are many excellent and effective 'pre-facelift' procedures available – including eyelid surgery browlift (forehead lift), mid-facelift (cheek lift) and laser skin resurfacing. Following a sensible timeline in cosmetic surgery these are procedures that will, in and of themselves ,'buy more time' before a conventional facelift is indicated. They will also provide a refreshed and youthful look during that period of the timeline."

Dr. D'Amico has devised some rules for following the new millennium's sanest and most important aesthetic surgery trend, the timeline in cosmetic surgery. He advises patients to study them as well as discuss them with their board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon before approaching their first, or first set, of rejuvenative procedures. They are as follows:

1. Cosmetic surgery, like aging itself, is cumulative. You do not have to "Have it all" to have the best results, and certainly not all at once. What is appropriate for a fifty-five year-old patient is not necessarily appropriate for a forty year-old patient – though the patient should understand that at a certain point in the future, it might be.

2. Find a plastic surgeon whom you like, feel you can communicate with, and whose operative plan for you – both now and later down the road – you feel comfortable with. Strikingly, cosmetic surgery is not unlike other medical and surgical sub-specialities, in which the status quo – staying with the same doctor or practice – can provide the best in terms of care and results. Many women, for example, now understand that it is best to go to the same radiology practice for their yearly mammogram because the films are compared from year to year and it is much more difficult for radiologists to critically assess results without prior films. The same is true of plastic surgery: it is much more difficult for a surgeon to assess what another surgeon has done in terms of procedures than to use his or her own work as a baseline.

3. Don't be afraid of facelift surgery. For many patients, the word facelift represents the penultimate end of the plastic surgery timeline. "Many people feel that the term facelift implies two things, both of which are negative: that they are getting old, and that this is the ultimate big deal surgery in terms of price and recovery," says Dr. D'Amico. In truth, age is just a number when it comes to plastic surgery.

4. Pay attention to the timeline your plastic surgeon outlines for you. If you decide you want that browlift tomorrow and he or she asks you to wait five years, there is good reason why he or she is making this request: he or she has probably consulted with, and operated on, hundreds if not thousands of patients and you'd do best to trust his or her judgment as to when to approach each procedure. The most or the least amount of plastic surgery isn't always the best amount at this particular moment in time. Again, your surgeon, providing that you trust in his or her skills as a physician, is the best judge.

Interiors & EXTERIORS

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Ready to start planting your creative container garden? First round up some pots. We like those inexpensive fake terra cotta colored containers. They're widely available in all shapes and sizes and look almost as good as real terra cotta, but don't dry out as fast as those very porous clay pots, so you don't have to water them nearly as often. They are also very lightweight and even stack compactly together when you're not using them.

Small plants such as lettuce, chives and such can get by in a six inch diameter (1.5 quart capacity) pot, but they'll probably do much better in a container that is eight inches (3 quarts) across and will absolutely thrive in a ten inch pot, because it hold twice as much soil (6 quarts).

For larger plants, such as tomatoes, eggplants and peppers you need to think big. Peppers require a pot that holds two or three gallons or so of soil; commercial ones this size usually run fifteen inches in diameter.

But your container doesn't have to be the commercial type pot. Punch some drainage holes in the bottom and you can use the plastic five gallon capacity food buckets often discarded by delis, supermarkets and bakeries.

What you fill those containers with is also of importance. Commercial soil-less potting mixes generally contain mostly peat moss, with some perlite and/or vermiculite (both are natural mineral substances) added to help hold moisture and for better aeration. But, since these mixes contain few plant nutrients, we strongly suggest adding one part compost and one part garden soil to every two parts of such a mix as you fill the pots. The compost will provide microorganisms to the mix. And your own soil particles will help hold those nutrients in place until the plant roots take them up.

When plant roots are confined in containers, they can't roam through the soil in search of nutrients and water the way an in-ground plant can.

Elizabeth and Crow Miller are the directors of The Spring Meadow Organic Farming and Gardening Research Farm in Southold. Have a question or problem with gardening, farming or landscaping? Call the free helpline, 631-725-5725. One question a call, please.

POLICE BLOTTER

An East Hampton man allegedly stole eleven air fresheners valued at $11.79 from the 7-Eleven store on North Sea Road in Southampton. According to police, Xavier Cavanaugh was arrested and charged with petit larceny by East Hampton Village Police on January 7. Cavanaugh was observed on store security tapes by Southampton police, who then passed the description on to East Hampton police, who after arresting the aforementioned alleged culprit, transferred him back to Southampton, where he was arraigned and issued an appearance ticket. He reportedly smelled fine.

There was a car accident involving a gray 1989 Lincoln taxi and a blue 1994 Acura at 11:47 p.m. on January 14, in which the driver of the Lincoln fled the scene, led to the arrest once again of Xavier Cavanaugh on January 15, according to East Hampton Town Police. The aforementioned Lincoln belongs to Hampton Coach, and Cavanaugh is only permitted to operate said vehicle between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. without special permission, according to the manager of that firm. Cavanaugh, the alleged driver of the Lincoln, reported the accident as happening at 8:00 a.m. on January, 15 with an unknown blue car which fled the scene. As this was believed to have been incorrect, Cavanaugh was charged with falsely reporting an accident.

Eric L. Dilbeck of Hampton Bays was arrested on January 29 at 2 p.m. after his car allegedly struck a light post in front of Hampton Bays High School, according to police. Police claimed that Dilbeck's car struck the post because it was travelling at an "excessive speed." Dilbeck was charged with trespassing.

An East Hampton woman complained to police that an allegedly intoxicated man threw rocks at her as she walked her three dogs on the beach on January 16. When asked to stop, the alleged rock thrower, later identified as Brian C. Bistrian, allegedly threw a full can of Busch beer at the complainant. Bistrian was then removed from the scene by two bystanders. Bistrian surrendered himself at police headquarters where he was charged with reckless endangerment in the second degree.

The Bridgehampton Country Market, located next to the palatial Dan's Papers office on Montauk Highway, reported a shoplifting incident on January 10. The culprit made off with a rump roast and three pounds of bacon valued at $17. The suspect, who escaped on a bicycle, is described by market employees as, about six-foot tall, 210 pounds and with no teeth.

An East Hampton man complained to police that an intruder had disturbed his house while he was away. Police responded to the home of Ed Di Benedetto of Ely Brook Road to investigate the possible attempted robbery. Upon examining the crime scene, police found the perpetrator dead in the house. Police speculate that the intruder, a squirrel, may have entered through the chimney.

Michael Davis of Springs came home for lunch on January 12 and found a window broken and a door ajar. Upon examination of his home, Davis discovered that $600 in change had been filched.

A twenty-three-year-old Southampton woman complained to police on January 10 that a woman she had a relationship with five years ago is harassing her. The woman allegedly found a note on her car that read, "I can taste your tears." In the last six months, approximately fifteen such notes have been left. If caught, the other woman could be charged with aggravated harassment.

Dan's LETTERS

HOMESICK
Dear Dan,

I have not lived in the Hamptons for about four years now. When I lived there I read your paper all the time. Keep up the great work, I miss it.

Jason Rizzo

DAN'S ASSETS
Dear Dan,

I just read the obituary on Joe Heller by Mr. Cimisi. It was very well written and I was impressed with it. Mr. Cimisi is an asset to your paper. Keep up the good work Dan, you know how to pick them.

John Mullen

CONGRATS FROM FLORIDA
Dear Dan,

When I lived in Eastport growing up, I remember reading your newspaper. It was delivered to the Holiday Grill, where my mom and I worked. I want to congratulate you for your success and interest in the community in which you live. Thank you.

Margie Coffman
Deerfield Beach, FL

JAMMIN'
Dear Dan,

Great Bob Marley story! I'm a fan of his as well, and my Director, Chapman Roberts, has a musical based on Marley's life in the works!

Four stars to "Mon-Talk." Stay with the beat, Ingrid! You know good music when you hear it!

STILL DOESN'T GLOW IN THE DARK
Dear Dan,

This is an open letter to Fish Unlimited, STAR and the NAACP.

You are all paranoid about the Peconic River. "Post the Peconic" – How absurd!

I have been in the Peconic, over my head, many times in the past thirty years. I have swum in Peconic Lake and by Mill and Forge Roads and in Grangable Park. I can't remember how many times I was in the water by Connecticut Avenue, the closest part of the Peconic to Brookhaven National Lab.

I have swallowed a few mouthfuls of the Peconic River over the years and I expect to live to 100. When I go into a dark room I still have to turn the lights on.

Many local fisherman have been fishing the Peconic and eating the fish for longer than I have been swimming in it. They look healthy to me. Must be the Peconic Pickerel.

Snowflake Ice Cream store, near the Peconic, has a flavor called Peconic River Swamp Ice Cream. Yum, Yum, Delicious! I wonder how it is made.

Why don't you guys leave the Peconic alone and take up an important cause like putting a stop to patronage in Suffolk politics?

Jim Dreeben
Peconic Paddler, Riverhead

NO LAUGHING MATTER
Dear Dan,

Your January 14 article regarding the creation of nuclear-free zones on the East End might be amusing were it not misleading and even dangerous. Your derisiveness on so important an issue can only be attributable to a lack of understanding and/or information on the danger of exposure to radioactive material, which, believe it or not, is an actual – not an imagined – threat.

Although the likelihood of constructing and launching nuclear weapons locally is indeed far-fetched, the transporting of nuclear material through our towns is not. Further, I wonder if you were aware of the so-called "low level" radioactive metal now being recycled into consumer goods, such as braces for teeth, baby strollers, pots and pans and anything else which is made of metal. This is the government's brilliant solution to the radioactive waste problem. As you know, Sag Harbor is in the process of building a new bridge to North Haven. How would you feel if the bridge were constructed with radioactive metal? Sag Harbor Village should be congratulated rather than demeaned for declaring itself a nuclear-free zone.

A newspaper's responsibility is to keep its readers abreast of issues which are relevant to the community. When you choose to sacrifice that responsibility in order to get a few laughs, you prove that Dan's Papers is worth every cent we pay for it.

Spend Valentine's Day At The Southampton Inn

Supporting the notion that "The Hamptons is for Lovers," The Southampton Inn, the Hamptons' first full-service destination resort, is offering a special Valentine's Day package on Saturday, February 12, for $149 plus tax, per couple. Guests who wish to add a Friday or Sunday night to their stay may do so at the special room rate of $99 plus tax per room per night, per room.

"We invite everyone to come enjoy a romantic weekend at our Inn, have a drink by our cozy fireplace and stroll along the beautiful beaches," says Barry M. Shatoff, general manager of the Southampton Inn.

For a romantic dinner, the Southampton Inn's excellent concierge service will be happy to make reservations at one of the fine local restaurants. And, for those who want a really special treat, guests can schedule an in-room massage for an additional charge.

The Valentine's day package will also include delicious chocolates, a rose on the pillow and bubble bath, which should set the mood for an intimate evening. In the morning guests can enjoy a continental breakfast and a late checkout.

While at the Inn, guests can also take advantage of the many fine shops and quaint atmosphere in the Town of Southampton, including the well-known Parrish Art Museum. "We want our guests to know that the Hamptons are a terrific place to visit in all seasons and that the Southampton Inn is a wonderful place for a special Valentine's Day getaway," affirms Mr. Shatoff.

In addition to the Valentines' Day package, The Southampton Inn will be offering a variety of special package deals, including President's Day weekend and March singles' weekends.

The Inn features ninety charming redecorated guest rooms with original art from the Schoolhouse Gallery, patchwork quilts and pillows, pine armoires outfitted with mini-refrigerators, color television and decoratively tiled baths. Amenities include hair dryers, plush robes, and telephone with data port and voice mail. The Southampton Inn is ADA compliant.

Conveniently located just a short drive from Manhattan, The Southampton Inn is ideal for cooperate meetings, retreats and social functions.

For more information on The Southampton Inn, call 1-800-832-6500 or 631-283-6500.
